

RESONATING AFFIRMATION

For Love

A premium affirmation with ancient information,

*Candle rituals and crystal association,
You also get my story so you're wise to your vibration,*

So you can be aligned with the desired situation...

of Love, passion, and kinship

BY RINZEN JOYE

Copyright

© Rinzen Joye 2019

All rights reserved.

No portion of this PDF may be reproduced in any form without permission from the publisher, except as permitted by copyright law.

Publisher: Omnipion Publishing

For permissions contact:

Omnipion Publishing

PoBox 240

SANDBACH

CW11 5EA

Resonating Affirmation for love

I am a child of this universe,
Which makes me worthy of love,
An embodiment of spirit,
Sent to earth from above.

There are plenty of souls like me,
Who wish to be loved like I do,
People who will embrace,
All that I have ensued.

We came to earth in clusters,
With similarities,
Therefore, it is logical,
There's people out there like me.

There's people out there waiting,
For everything I am,
Some who are so right for me,
And all that I have planned.

I give thanks to these personas,
Spread across the planet,
I will now keep my eyes open,
For the day when we will meet.

I will search for the signal,
That inform me they're around,
Those heart flutters that tell me,
My match has been found.

I can be aware,
Each time I see a mate,
Notice the serendipity,
The Resonation Realm makes.

I will keep my heart open,
Like a book that's ever-read,
No longer shall I guard myself,
From the life I should've led.

It's not too late to notice,
A lover as we pass,
Something will now stop us both,
And make us want to chat.

A serendipitous event,
Could now occur,
Something the universe aligns,
So we can both emerge.

I know they're out there somewhere,
All lovers and soulmates,
I feel I can believe right now,
For love, it's not too late.

I deserve to be happy,
I deserve to be loved,
I deserve a mate so divine,
It feels they're sent from above.

I know someone will treat me right,
That someone can commit,
There's someone who will take delight,
In all I have to give.

I'm ready now and open,
To let this person in,
So the Resonation Realm's magic,
Can truly begin.

I'm thankful for the billions,
Of humans across the globe,
All different and all waiting,
For the love inside my soul.

I'm here to love my lover,
As they are for me,
I'm ready now, Resonation Realm;
Bring the perfect one to me.

I can feel their essence,
Like I would for real,
This the universe will see,
As me sealing the deal.

I can imagine togetherness,
Now while I'm alone,
Once I conjure that emotion,
Then my lover can be shown.

I am never separated,
From source energy,
The partner I want is out there;
They're lined up for me.

All I have to do right now,
Is conjure the essence of love,
Know my lover is on their way,
Just simply trust.

I can say good morning,
And can say goodnight,
To the blissful vibration,
Of my someone who's just right.

I will soon hold in my arms,
The one I visualise,
They will surpass my expectations,
A true gift, and a great surprise.

As soon as my heart can feel now,
Exactly how it would,
Electromagnetic fields,
Will radiate from me to my love.

Thank you to my lover,
In this time advanced,
For being out there for me,
And waiting for this chance.

I'll see you soon, my soulmate,
I will notice open doors,
In the meantime, I send love right now,
From my heart into yours.

You can also do a prayer to the Goddess of Love
Kurukulla, who will bless you with love and liberation.

Kurukulle or Kurukulla, also called Rigjedma is the Tibetan Buddhist Goddess of Love, Lust, Sex, Magic, Enchantment, and Liberation.

She is well known amongst Tibetans for her magical powers of enchantment and bewitching.

She is the Buddhist goddess of witchcraft and enchantment but she also represents empowerment of the feminine in a patriarchal milieu.

In Tibet, they also call upon her when starting to build new monasteries, undertaking new businesses or enterprises which is said to subdue and subjugate all demonic and human strengths that stand in ones' path.

According to ancient texts, Kurukulle is thought of as 16 years old, because sixteen is the ideal number that signifies perfection.

She is depicted in red for her magnetism, has a voluptuous body, always alluring, single faced because she embodies non-dual knowledge beyond conventional distinctions of good and evil, and often naked because she is unconditioned by discursive thoughts.

Her four arms represent immeasurable states of mind: love: empathy: joy, and serenity. She holds a bow and arrow entwined with flowers because she can give rise to thoughts of desire in others minds. On her other hands, she holds a hook that attracts and summons them into her presence and nose to bind them to the will.

In addition, she wears human bone ornaments signifying the 5 perfections, and she herself embodies the sixth perfection of wisdom. She wears a necklace of fifty human heads as she vanquishes fifty negative emotions. She is a Dikini, therefore dancing to show her energetic and active essence and usually dances treading upon a male human corpse, as she enchants and subjugates the demon of ego. She also stands on a red sun disc because her nature is hot and inflamed with passion, or upon a red lotus blossom because she is the pure vision of enlightened awareness.

Chanting the mantra for Kurukulle will help you with working with your desires, not only for love but you will notice all your desires. She magnetises them to you, and makes them manifested in your real life, so you get to see the good, the bad, the beautiful, and the ugly parts of your own mind! This way your subconscious blockages will be revealed so you can do something about them.

As your internal conflicts come out, you cannot brush them under the carpet, all your desires will come to your mind at once! So it's wise to seek support if there's more to deal with than you can handle alone.

This prayer to Kurukulle is best before you sleep and in the morning before starting your day. Throughout the day, your inner hope and trust should remind you that abundance is coming to you.

The mantra to invoke the power is: "Om Shrim Kurukulla Swaha." You can read it at first until it becomes memorised, or anyway that flows for you.

Repeat this mantra at least 108 times within a day, anytime you like.

The free MP3 I sent you along with this package worth $9.99 of me chanting this mantra means you can simply play it to invoke the power. If you sing along, and get the tune stuck in your mind, you'll be manifesting your soulmate a lot quicker.

I hope you enjoy listening to it. The affirmation and mantra together is all some people need to unblock their “love” system.

Crystal Association

To Attract Love, Passion and Kinship

Crystals are energy. Each crystal vibrates and emits different energies. Many are vibrating at the energy of universal love, but there is one in particular that you can use to help bring love into your life...

Holding any pink and red crystals will help to invoke the feeling of love and passion while you are reciting your Resonating Affirmation, but one of the most powerful stones for attracting love is rose quartz, because it opens your heart centre, restoring love and trust.

Rose Quartz is considered to be the stone of unconditional, pure love. It resonates with true love, friendship and harmonious relationships. As its energy fills your heart with unconditional love, it will help you attract your true love into your life.

Keeping rose quartz by your bedside and practicing the Resonating Affirmation each day while holding the rose quartz will help draw a new love into your life. It opens your heart to receive love and reminds you that you are worthy of love. By placing rose quartz in the home's heart it allows for love and kindness to flow. You can also wear this stone to remind you that love is coming your way.

Rose Quartz penetrates into the inner chambers of the heart chakra and promotes the heart's ability to give and receive love. Rose Quartz teaches you to love yourself and receive love from another. It transforms your energy to foster positivity and openness, which prepares you for meeting your soul mate.

Invoking the energy of this love stone with your own intention is the most impactful way to open your life up to receiving the flow of love.

A Candle Ritual to Attract Love, Passion and Kinship

Purchasing a coloured candle associated with your desire will help you harness the feeling of that desire and hence help with its manifestation.

The colour you would need to buy to invoke the feeling of love would be red or pink, depending on which type of love you want, a passionate love or a deep connection with a soulmate. To combine the two, find a pinky-red candle.

Run a bath, play some ambient background music (preferably Resonating Music) and light the candle.

As you light the candle say what you would most like to say for real I.e. “I am loved,” “I have a soulmate,” “I am desirable,”

To make it a “Resonating Affirmation”, you must also believe and trust this can be true and it’s on its way for it to work. If this is hard to do, then ask yourself questions like, “is it possible for me to be loved?” Your mind will come back with a “Yes” because this is true. This will help you get there with the truth of your declaration, so it can truly resonate and vibrate out into the Resonation Realm.

Lie back and watch the candle burn, basking in the essence of that affirmation. Feel how comforting it is to have that statement be true.

My Story and Advice Around Manifesting Love

I mention in my Resonation Realm books that it took me 2 days to manifest my soulmate, but that was after attracting the wrong kinds of men, through the wrong types of thoughtlings (thoughts and feelings together), which enabled me to get a good knowledge of what I didn't want, before putting out a new thoughtling of what I did want.

Until this clarification, I had never sought out a Buddhist or “someone spiritual” who meditated and thought about the universe in the way I had. Before living with a husband who hated the fact that I had to write, especially on sunny days, I’d never had the desire to find someone who was creative like me, who had a real understanding of the creative process and how it’s a must, not a hobby, come rain or shine.

I also never contemplated the idea that there could be a male version of me out there. Simply because not only did I presume he would look like a long-haired hippy musician type with no money and cares in the world, and I wanted (at the time because of what I went through with the father of my kids) someone stable and secure, and also because it really didn't matter to me if they had things in common, as long as I got on well with the person, and they respected my habits as much as I respected theirs.

Until I realised that I should have been contemplating these things and many more, I kept attracting men that were a version of a thoughtling I'd put out due to the negative stuff and therefore a knowing of what I didn't want from the previous relationship.

For example, I wanted a carefree man who was happy go lucky because of my negative partner, and I attracted a drunk who's only interest was football, who left a mess all over my home.

Because of this man, I wanted a clean and tidy man who didn't like football, which brought me my OCD husband who freaked out at a little dirt and mess, who I could never feel relaxed with, and who ended up telling me, after showing he resented me for walking a spiritual path, that I needed someone from the Buddhist centre which, at that point, I took note of.

As my husband told me to hurry up and clear out my things – as he had company that weekend due to finding someone immediately on a dating website – I decided I would try and find a spiritual website.

Because of my OCD husband, however, I only put out the fact that I wanted a man who would never demand anything much from me. That's when I attracted the regimented bachelor who wanted a twice per week agreement, and would never want anything more.

When I started to get close and ask if he wanted to come on a Buddhist retreat, he told me he couldn't give me what I wanted and ended it.

It was then that I sat down and pondered "What the hell do I want, regardless of what I've been through before?"

All my life up to that point I'd had chosen partners who liked who I was at first, then began to resent it, (or as I see now put on an act to impress. you and pretend they're okay with your "ways" until they decide they can no longer hide their Opinions for them) when it should have been me who thought in depth about what I really liked and wanted.

The fact was, all I ever really wanted was a best-mate type of man to love and have a laugh with and share good times with who was kind, calm, respectful and understanding. I always used to add that I wanted a man with tattoos, and who was four stone heavier than me, but that's only because of my insecurities that if they didn't have them, then they wouldn't like mine and because if they were bigger, then I wouldn't feel as fat.

And then I'd put in a preference due to the negative parts I'd found in others before... which I didn't need to do. The universe is well aware of what I don't want each time I come up against it, there's no need to vibrationally add the condition of there being an opposite to this when I put in the vibration of what I prefer.

So, here I was with this light bulb moment, contemplating the fact that, if I'd had no contrast at all then I would want a partner I could live with even before all my books were written, one who was creative enough to understand, in fact, one who was creative enough to make songs up with me and get involved in my long-term plans of being a self-publishing indie author entrepreneur, then travel the world with me finding exciting things.

This time, I was also willing to leave the tattoo part out; it didn't matter if they didn't have them, only that they were okay with mine.

Once I knew what I really wanted, and cleared my negative, tarnished vibrations, I was free to write a list of exactly what I wanted.

My pen wouldn't stop. This is what I wrote...

“Dear universe, and all the forces that lie within it and myself, I am now ready for my true love. I, therefore, want someone who is on their own spiritual path, who likes to meditate and maybe do yoga, and who is creative in his own way and therefore, understanding and maybe even helpful to my own creativity. He needs to be calm, patient, gentle and have a lovely, genuine soul, whose honest and trustworthy essence will shine through his face and who is not afraid to look me deep in the eyes. I want him to be someone I can contemplate the universe with, who will be relaxed and go with the flow, and accept that I want to live on my own for now, yet fully be there for me as a solid partner who wants to build and plan a future with me, where we will one day live together. Someone who will dance around the room in fits of joy and be silly with me, someone who doesn't care what others think because they know in themselves they are good and who will be a good influence on me. Someone who has good ethics and principles, someone who is their own person with their own mind like me and yet who will help me broaden mine and deepen my own spirituality and explore things I haven't even thought of yet on my own path. Someone who the universe knows will suit me right now and forever as I grow, because he is growing too. Someone who the universe knows I will appreciate now, and more as time goes on due to our relationship deepening. Someone who I know and trust is pure and wonderful. He will be looking for someone as 'mad' as I am. He will actually love the fact that I'm writing my own books and creating and that I'm spiritual. He will want what I offer him: a best-mate for a partner, someone to have and to hold fully, someone who will give her heart entirely, and someone he can fully trust who will provide him with pure, unconditional love. He will be someone who will embrace and appreciate the love I have to give and who will love me for who I am and yet support me in any future goals or changes that will occur. We will both be thankful to the universe for our being placed together. Thank you in advance, and so let it be."

I was so happy at that moment, writing my in-depth list, that I felt I'd already attracted him. I'd already felt the sublime vibration of what I wrote, as if I was holding him in my arms. I was happy with nothing, just the feeling. I was glad to wait, but I also decided that I would do a ritual.

I dimmed the lights, lit candles and incense, sat on my meditation cushion with binaural beats and peaceful music playing and sent out love from my heart to his. I visualised a heart bubble expanding across space and time from my heart to his, wherever he was on the planet, and that he was feeling it, feeling me, so he would know me and feel that love twinkle of me in his heart when I met him.

I visualised treating this man with such love and care, always being in appreciation mode for the person he is and, as I said goodnight to him, I felt the weight of his hand in mine.

There was no conflict, no resistance, no asking for what I didn't want, no doubting I couldn't have the specifics; I felt him in all the correct ways. I was genuinely thankful and grateful he was mine already. You may think I was being over the top, but I knew I must feel this in my being more than anything else I'd ever communicated an "ask" for into the Resonation Realm for the inspiration and awareness of his whereabouts would be clearly downloaded into my blueprint, and therefore knew I was already going to be lead to him with ease. I knew if I were confused in my vibration once more about what type of man I wanted, I would be guided to someone confused. But guess what? After I told the universe what I wanted, this man was brought to my inner awareness in two days!

I was already on a spiritual dating website (which I came across through various hints from IT) and I'd clicked on this man's profile because he had kind eyes, but I thought nothing of it until he messaged me and, as soon as we started communicating, I knew he was the guy I intended to have.

The most beautiful thing about it was the fact that it wasn't shocking to me. I actually believed this man existed and that I would be lead to him, that I'd have the internal, visceral YES inside my gut when I got there. I knew in my clear thoughtling state of communication, with my “isn’t this nice” feeling, and releasing it into the Resonation Realm, that I’d get him.

The old saying when things go well for people is ‘I can’t believe it.’ Well, I really could believe it. I’d found my perfect match, my soul mate, my longed-for partner I thought I could never have! In fact, (to quote Madonna) I didn’t know how lost I’d been until I found him.

It felt so natural and beautiful. I knew he was not only appearing in my life because of the thoughtling I’d had then, but I also knew he was for keeps!

How did I know? Because, I knew I would always be forever thankful to the universe for bringing him to me, and I will appreciate him every day for who he is, and remember how grateful I am he came into my life. Which is exactly how I feel as I write this, four years later... and update with no edits six years later!

Some relationships, especially when the initial buzz of just fancying someone has gone, end up going stale as time goes on because they find that they don’t really know the person, or even like or respect the person. Some go stale because they have nothing in common, and what once used to impress them now annoys them. With us, I know we will never be bored.

Rockets of new desires are being born between us all the time.

He's a musician, and I'm a songwriter, so we've been writing songs and recording unique Resonating Music with OM AH HU chants and binaural beats. We do yoga together and try to do our own kind of couple's meditations, where we breathe into one another, which gives us a profound and meaningful connection. He dances with me. He embraces the love I have to offer and hugs me like his life depends on it. He looks deep into my eyes to view my soul. He's into Reiki. He not only understands I need my separate space, but he has also been doing the same in a studio, getting better with his own music and helping me with mine for the business creating covers and trailers for my urban fantasy books I write under the name Debbie Zain.

This was the reason I moved in with him quicker than I had previously put out that I wanted to. He's always understood that I needed time to write, yet still wanted to live with me regardless.

He's also two and a half stone heavier so when I lose my two stone he will be my usual recommended 4 stone heavier, and I even liked the fact that he hadn't got any tattoos until he said he wanted one and got one of a dove, which represents him fully. He also loves me with the overweight body I have, but does support the fact that I am aiming for my optimum fitness and health.

Basically, he's all the things on my list and a whole lot more, and I'm so happy I manifested him!

So, there it is. The simple key to finding someone that resonates with you is to put out a thoughtling of already having that person in your life, and how appreciative you feel about that, leaving all negative connotations out of the equation, and sending them your love now.

If you would like more help manifesting Love, then you may wish to take a look at the full Resonating Affirmation for love package on my Premium Affirmations page.

If I can be of further assistance, don't hesitate to ask. You can email me at omnipionpublishing@yahoo.com.

Blessings to you, and much love from me.

Rinzen xxx